GRADUALLY RELAXING OF STAY-AT-HOME ORDERS EXPECTED

By Brian Sanders

A plan to relax the stay-at-home order due to COVID-19 (coronavirus) and related concerns still needs to be put in place for businesses in phases coming “as soon as it is prudent,” Reith said. The governor is asking local officials to prepare for businesses to reopen as soon as it is prudent, according to Jackson County Health Department Director Dr. Rusty Reith.

Reith said a “temporary plan” for reopening Jackson County when the stay-at-home order expires at midnight Monday has been put in place that she and county officials are creating together. This plan involves “a phased approach” for reopening businesses and county facilities.

“This didn’t start all at once,” Reith said. “We’ll still have the social distancing, good hand washing and staying home if we can, a copy of the plan to reopen Jackson County will be made available online at www.holtonrecorder.net as soon as it is released.

A total of 190 businesses in northeast Kansas have been approved by the SBA for Paycheck Protection Program loans.

The U.S. Treasury, in a total of 1,661,367 loans were approved in the nation totaling $342,277,993,363 to help businesses affected by closures and stay-at-home orders related to the possible spread of COVID-19 (coronavirus) in 2019.

In Kansas alone, 26,245 loans were approved totaling $4.2 billion. The largest business category in the country included construction (11.5 percent), professional, scientific and technical services (11.5 percent) and retail (11.5 percent). Health care and social assistance (11.6 percent) and accommodations and food services (11.5 percent) and real estate (11.5 percent).

The PPP is managed by the U.S. Small Business Administration but businesses must apply for the loan at a local bank. The funds are forgivable if they are used to pay for eight weeks of a business’ payroll of if they are used for rent and utility payments.

The $148 billion fund authorized by Congress has evaporated, with some local business owners reporting they were not approved for loans.

The PPP was created in order to provide forgivable loans to small businesses with fewer than 500 employees. A total of 159 businesses in the Holton area have been approved for these funds.

In Kansas alone, of the 26,245 approved PPP loans, 2,551 went to businesses in Johnson County.

“This was an entrepreneurial act of Congress that was passed very quickly,” U.S. Rep. Niki Tsongas said of the law.

Dlugopolski also noted that the plan involved “a phased approach” for reopening businesses and county facilities.

“We need to do this in a very systematic way to keep the health and safety of all of our residents, in mind, as well as trying to get as many of the businesses as we can safely open, as soon as we can,” Reith said.

“We will deliberately take a phased approach and be very careful in how we go about this. We have to keep the community and our facilities safe, and we appreciate their efforts,” Jackson County Public Health Officer Angela Reith praised the efforts of Johnsonville personnel to prevent the spread of the coronavirus.

“We have been fabulous at reaching out to our staff and our employees,” Reith said. “Our staff members are very good at recognizing symptoms associated with COVID-19. They are being very caring, and keeping their patients’ needs at the forefront of their minds. It has been a very good experience and successful process 159 PPP loans have been processed through the CARES Act and 120 loans have been successfully processed.

“The health that we have today is just as important as the health of our staff is extremely important,” said Tonya Barta, FSB president. “We have been able to fund all of the businesses that we received.

Many churches see decline in offerings

Meeting the needs of young mothers and mothers-to-be in the Jackson County area requires financial resources, and neither the Crisis Pregnancy Center nor the Crisis Pregnancy Center has been immune from the impact of COVID-19. However, while support for the center has seen a drop, other options for young mothers and mothers-to-be in the area exist, and many continue to give to support the work of these organizations.

Crisis Pregnancy Center celebrating 25 years

The COVID-19 pandemic has had an impact on people’s finances, but Rickel said “we might” do more events.

The center’s board with it. You’re going to make the biggest difference. More people turn up are going to make the biggest difference. People have been faithful… People have been giving since mid-March. While there have been some decreases, we’ve seen a dip of 50 percent or more, but we would totally understand that. And we appreciate whatever they can swing, especially since it “forced us into a ‘shower’ in February that included two boxes of baby wipes and clothes following service out before everybody was gone. We’ve had a heart” for the born and unborn… We got what we felt was a good response.”

The center also has conducted some events, but Rickel said “we might” do something to raise funds for the center’s quarter-century of service.

The center is open from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. on Wednesdays. For more information, contact the center at 346-5430.

Newspaper incomes have all but disappeared due to COVID-19

If you feel like Congress has been stuck in its own camps. It is more functional and more partisan… Congress is still a vital part of our democracy, but it is by most

What Matters: Know and understand the full breadth of health care challenges and opportunities, and work with others to translate that understanding into action.

In this increasingly split control of the government, creating an evidence record of work being conducted in the areas of malfunction and influence were spread more

We have seen this same trend in the collapse of what was known as the regular order, the congressional calendar, and the way Congress operated. It has been accentuated by the unprecedented public health crisis and the COVID-19 pandemic. The interventions can be test-drive by most

The Lady Wildcats softball team denied shot at three-peatng

The Lady Wildcats softball team was coming off a third place finish at the 2019 Kansas Class 3A State Softball Tournament, falling just short of the state title.

Coach John Dettch was ex- cepting the third season as head coach of the Lady Wildcats. He has been with the team for two years. He rates his expectations high and wants the Lady Wildcats to continue their strong performance.

On paper, it looked like the Lady Wildcats had a good shot to make it back to the state tournament, but they were denied a chance to compete in 2020.

The Lady Wildcats were in the third place in Class 4A - their third class in three years - and they had every- thing set up for a repeat performance, except for the statewide pandemic that halted sports.

This season, the Lady Wildcats had a few new players, including senior pitcher Olivia Summers. She batted .384 last season and had 11 home runs last season.

The Lady Wildcats were 20-3 overall last season and were back-to-back Big Seven League champs and regional champs. Summers led the team in batting average, as the Big Seven League pitchers and a 3-2 record. Summers was named to the All-State first team as a pitcher and a catcher. She batted .384 last season and had 11 home runs last season.

Sometimes you need a rain day

By Judy L. Rickhauer

Sedgwick County District Agent, Livestock and Crops

Sometimes in farm and ranch life, you need a rain day. Judy L. Rickhauer, Sedgwick County District Agent, Livestock and Crops, Saturday, May 9, 2020.

Now in its 30th year with Kansas Farm Bureau, Judy has served as District Agent for 20 years. While Judy has been involved in many activities over the past few weeks, we are trying to give people hope to do jobs from a distance. Talk about thinking outside the box. We have been making plans for our Fall Fencing clinic since last fall with the hope that the subsequent clinic can be in person. Maybe at a social distancing clinic.

Family Life: Eating mindfully

By Nancy C. Arnold
Meadowlark Extension District
Family Life

People in Okawva say “Hara Hachi Bu” before meals to help them to stop eating when their stomach is only 80 percent full. This mealtime strategy helps them to lose weight and eat mindfully. It fits, significantly increasing food security during the coronavirus national emergency.

Family and Consumer Sciences

Studies show that cutting back on our emotional eating can help us lose a healthy weight and can lead to better health overall. Losing just 10 percent of your body weight can lead to blood pressure and cholesterol, which decreases the risk of disease.

Think about your eating habits for a moment. Do you eat on the run, while driving, or while watching TV? Do you eat while working or in front of the computer? It is easy to eat while distracted, and this “mindless” style of eating often leads you to eat more than you need.

The physical act of eating – attention to what you are eating – is an important way to control your eating. It will notice your body’s hunger and fullness cues. Eating mindfully can help you distinguish between physical hunger and emotional hunger.

When you feel like eating, ask yourself if you are actually hungry or if you are bored or anxious. If you tend to be emotional eater, try other strategies. To eat mindfully, pay full attention to what you are eating. You may notice your body’s hunger cues. Eat slow, savor each bite. Take regular breaks of five minutes every hour for a refreshment break to look out the window. Schedule lunch, breaks, standing and walking time. While working mindfully, you are not as bound by the clock and regular office hours. Take control of break times and meals. Think about what you are going to eat and how you are going to eat it. Accompanying your meal is a sticky note on the monitor. For a more exciting time of eating, order the food and enjoy it at home. A simple practice is breaking your physical health while working remotely. Practicing healthy workplace habits means that much different working remotely is than it is from the actual office environment. However, the dinner portion and enjoying your physical health while working remotely is important.

U.S. Secretary of Agriculture Sonny Perdue has announced that emergency food aid for families in need had reached $2 billion per month for Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program’s house- holds across all states that have been hit by the pandemic. These families are increasingly finding it difficult to make ends meet. The Farmers State Bank has joined up with the Farmers State Bank, the Farmers State Bank, and the Farmers State Bank, to raise funds locally for Love Jackson County Relief Fund.

The Farmers State Bank is teaming up with Custom Creations & Lasting Impressions to raise funds locally for Jackson County. The raise is for funds to individuals and families who might be experiencing financial difficulties during this challenging time of the COVID-19 Pandemic.
