Fire department's second engine returns

By Brian Sanders

An important part of the Holton Fire Department's history returned home on Thursday after spending a few years in Florida.

Members of the fire depart-ment gathered to welcome a 1928 model GMC American-LaFrance pumper truck — the second fire engine ever owned by the city's fire department — back to Holton as it arrived that afternoon on the back of a tractor-trailer driven by Holton resident Adam Mann.

Holton Fire Chief Kevin Ingels said the old fire engine was gifted to the city by a retired Florida firefighter, provided the fire department could find a way to get the truck shipped from Florida back to Holton. But with Mann's help, the truck has been returned to its old department.

However, it's not going to return to active duty, Chief Ingels said — and not just because of national fire protection laws that keep old fire engines on the sidelines.

"It doesn't have the original motor or transmission," he said. "That truck normally, from the factory, had a Buick motor in it for the first few years, then they put a GM six-cylinder engine in. But what's in there now doesn't run anyway."

Eventually, Ingels said, he and his fellow firefighters would like to rectore the old fire would like to restore the old fire engine to its former glory, or as close as possible, just like the department did with the 1943 model fire engine that took the old American-LaFrance's place some 15 years after it went into service and is now seen in events like the recent Jackson County Fair Parade.

"It may be 20 years down the road before it's completely restored," Ingels said. "We'll probably work on it a little bit here and there, through donations or memorial money. No taxpayer money will be used to restore this truck. It will all be done through donations."

According to Holton newsaper reports from early 1928, the city approved the purchase of the American-LaFrance engine to take the place of an old-

Members of Holton's fire department worked to get a 1928 model American-LaFrance fire engine off a tractor trailer shortly after the engine arrived in Holton on Thursday afternoon. The fire engine was the second owned by the fire department in its history, it was reported, and it was returned to the department after spending the last few years in Florida. sis, two chemical tanks, ladders, a 350-gallon pump and 1,200 feet of hose, cost the city $6,000, it was reported at that

Ingels recalled that about 20 years ago, former fire chief The American-LaFrance, Eugene Zwonitzer had located which came with a GMC chasthe old American-LaFrance engine and was looking to bring it back to Holton, long after it had been out of service. "I can't remember where Gene said he found it. I think it was California, but it could have been Florida," Ingels

In recent years, the old American-LaFrance had been in the possession of a retired firefighter living in Palm Beach, Fla. A few weeks ago, he contacted another retired firefighter, Robert Brantley, known for restoring old firefighting equipment in nearby Pompano, Fla., and asked if he'd be willing to restore the old fire engine.

Manhunt ends in mud

■ Burglary suspects captured near Hoyt

A manhunt for two Topeka residents believed to have been involved in a burglary in east central Jackson County ended when Kansas Highway Patrol K-9 units found one of the suspects attempting to conceal himself in mud north of Hoyt.

Eric Christopher Fernandez, 30, and Chelsea Nichol Ray, 25, both of Topeka, were arrested by Jackson County Sheriff's deputies on Saturday afternoon following a search for the two Topekans that began late Friday evening, according to Jackson County Sheriff Tim Morse.

Fernandez and Ray are currently being held at the Jackson County Detention Center, with Fernandez facing charges of burglary, trespassing, felony obstruction and theft while Ray faces burglary, trespassing and felony obstruction charges, Sheriff Morse said.

On Friday evening, sheriff's officers received a report of two individuals believed to be burglarizing a residence in the 13000 block of S Road between Hoyt and Mayetta. Neighbors of the residence approached the two individuals, who fled in a silver SUV, Morse said. The SUV later got stuck on private property, and the two suspects reportedly abandoned the vehicle, which was impounded by law enforcement later that night, according to Morse, who said a manhunt for the suspects ensued and continued late into the night.

Sheriff's officers received a report on Saturday afternoon from an area resident who had spotted the two suspects. Not long after that, Ray was reportedly captured by deputies east of U.S. Highway 75 on 134th

The hunt for the second suspect continued, with assistance from a KHP helicopter and K-9 units, officers from police de-

John Wisdom is serving as the new pastor of First Baptist Church in Holton.

Wisdom started working at FBC on June 9 and has served in various ministry roles in the past 16 years in Missouri and Texas. For the past two years, Wisdom, a native of southwest Missouri, pastored a church just outside San Antonio, Texas. Wisdom's dad was a Baptist pastor, and Wisdom said following in his footsteps was the last thing on his mind as a teenager.

"From a young age, I made a declaration that I would not be a preacher," Wisdom said. "So I tell others now to be careful what they say. It was the last thing I wanted to do.'

After college, Wisdom entered the military and served overseas in Kuwait just after

"It was during this season of life that I had a 'desert experience' and came back a different guy," he said. "When I got out of the army, my wife, Vanessa, and I got heavily involved in our home church working with the youth and then that led to more leading, teaching and preaching.'

He received his bachelor's degree from Missouri State University and a master of divinity from Midwestern Baptist Theological Seminary in Kansas City, Mo. Wisdom said he's interested in pursuing his doctorate from the seminary in the future.

Wisdom said he was excited about the opportunity to move

UNDERSERVED CHILDREN According to a recent study, 7.7 million children aged 17 years and under have been diagnosed with at least one mental health concern (such as anxiety, depression, bipolar disorder, ADHD, or any one of over 200 possible mental nealth issues). At the same time, researchers found that at least half this number receives treatment. Whether the cause can be traced to an overuse of technology or simply increased awareness of mental health problems, mental health conditions have been on the rise among U.S. children and teenagers. Unless these conditions are addressed with proper treatment, there is an increased risk that youngsters will enter adulthood with a greater chance of lifelong mental illness and other health problems. P.S. According to some studies, children who get behavioral therapies for attention deficit hyperactivity disorder (ADHD) instead of, or in addition to,

lrug therapies fare better in the long run

Both children and adults can have ADHD, but symptoms always begin in childhood. Children with ADHD may have trouble sitting still, following directions, and completing tasks at home or school. Finding the right ADHD treatment, including medications and behavioral therapies, is crucial to managing ADHD. To schedule a consultation, please call our office. We offer a wide array of services that includes mental rehabilitation services for children, youth, and adults. OFFERING HOPE FOR A HEALTHIER TOMORROW

Angel Food Cake 1 3/4 cup granulated sugar

½ teaspoon salt 1 cup cake flour, sifted

12 egg whites from large eggs (room temperature)

1/3 cup warm water 1 teaspoon vanilla extract

1 ½ teaspoon cream of tartar

Directions: Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Use a food processor to spin sugar until it is superfine (about two minutes). Sift half of the sugar together with the salt and the cake flour. Set the remaining sugar aside.

In the bowl of a stand mixer (fitted with the whisk attachment) mix together the egg whites, water, vanilla extract and cream of tartar for about one minute on low. Slowly sift the reserved sugar into the egg white mixture, beating continuously on medium speed. Once you have achieved medium peaks, sift enough of the flour mixture in to dust the top of the foam, using a spatula to fold in gently. Continue adding the flour mixture slowly until all of the flour mixture is incorporated.

Carefully spoon mixture into an ungreased tube pan. Bake for 35 minutes before checking for doneness with a wooden skewer. Cool upside down on cooling rack for at least an hour before removing from pan.

Thank You!

My family and I would like to thank Korben Fox, Gavin Fox and Bodie Dillon for their quick reactions to getting help in regards to my side-by-side (UTV) accident. If it wasn't for the boys being down at the low water bridge fishing and contacting Joel & Jodi Fox and Chris & Rachel Gross, whose locations were the closest to the accident, I would not be here to write this thank you myself. It was their determination to get the UTV off of me, Chris pulling me out of the creek and immediately starting CPR on me that were crucial to bringing me back to life. Chris, Rachel and Joel then kept me alive by taking turns performing chest compressions on me for 20 minutes. Rachel Dillon helped with the kids and Ruth, our dog, who had jumped off the UTV. I owe them ALL my life!!!! There will be forever a bond between all of us.

I do also want to thank all of the first responders who answered the call, all of the prayers, food, cards and financial support that everyone else has done for me and my family. It is so surprising that I am more or less back to normal after being under the water for 7 minutes. I do have a broken sternum (which is expected if CPR is done correctly) and 5-6 broken ribs (probably caused from the UTV being on me), but thankfully those areas don't even hurt – unless I sneeze. Small town communities are WONDERFUL!

Everyone needs to learn from my experience. You need to cherish every moment you have while you are alive. It could be taken away from you at any moment. I guess it wasn't my time to go yet. I must have some more work to do. Thank you, again!!!

With 19 mass shootings so far this year in the United States...

Here's 10 tips for safer travel in today's world

Twenty people were killed in a mass shooting at a shopping complex Saturday at El Paso,

Within 24 hours, another massacre occurred when someone killed nine people, including his sister, at an entertainment district in Dayton, Ohio.

Two massacres, 13 hours apart. Twenty-nine people dead and at least 53 injured.

Last week, we learned about three people being fatally shot and 15 injured at a a garlic festival at Gilroy, Calif.

So far this year in the U.S., there have reportedly been 19 mass shootings where four or more people were killed. In all, more than 100 people have been gunned down, so far this year.

Over the weekend in Kansas City, a 25-year-old woman was killed by a stray bullet at a popular nightlife venue.

Yesterday, at Oak Park Mall in the Overland Park area, I found myself actively scanning the big crowd of shoppers for potential

If you've been to public events that attract massive crowds, you've probably been looking around and doing the same thing that I was yesterday.

If you're not doing that yet, you're foolish, in my view. History has taught us that catastrophic things can happen when large groups of people as-

Statistically, experts say you are safer in a crowd than you are when driving a car, and I agree, but with all these mass shootings I don't think you can feel incredibly safe at any big crowds, anymore.

Here are some tips from emergency responders on how to feel and stay as safe as possible when you're in a big crowd.

1. Wear shoes that aren't likely to fall off, trip you up or be hard to run in if necessary. To make falling less likely, go for a practical pair of boots, sneakers, or another sturdy shoe you can depend on in an emergency.

Skip options like flip-flops, which don't offer much traction and can become a tripping hazard. Similarly, giant heels can make it harder to run or leave you more vulnerable to a twisted ankle.

2.Consider wearing clothes that are pretty hard to vank on and unlikely to make you stumble. Tell your wardrobe we're sorry: Much like the footwear tip, it can make sense to consider your outfit for a huge event with an eye on safety.

3.Hydrate before and during the event. Dehydration and fainting are very common at cramped and crowded events. The prolonged standing and the heat generated from a crowd can impair someone's normally resilient physiology.

4.Go easy on the alcohol. Keeping your drink tally low will help you keep your wits about you. It's no secret that excessive amounts of alcohol can cause issues like a loss of motor control, delayed reactions and poor decision-making, but so can just small changes in your blood alcohol content.

5. Charge your phone fully beforehand. Should you become injured or separated from your group, you can use the device to call for help or call your group.

6.Come up with a plan in case you and your friends get separated. Make a backup plan with your friends in case you get separated in an emergency. It's not enough to make plans to take an Uber ride to or from an event. You need to know what you're going to do, if there's a safety issue at the event you are planning to attend.

7.Identify all of the venue's exits when you arrive, especially the ones closest to you. Knowing the way you came in isn't enough. If panic ensues, many people will instinctively try to get out the way they entered. You need smart alternatives.

8.In the rare event that the crowd stampedes, try to move diagonally to the edge of the group. Avoid going to the center of the group. It's best to stay on the perimeter. Assume a boxerlike stance as you go: hands up and in front of your chest (this gives you a bit more room to breathe), feet planted firmly on the ground when you're not

9.If a fire alarm goes off or you smell suspicious smoke, get out immediately. If there's a fire (or even a hint of one), move toward an exit ASAP. Don't look

your prespective on law enforcement

By John Richard Schrock The most memorable week of learning that I arranged was in Hong Kong in 1976. And I wasn't even the teacher. I put 60+ students through one week of experiences with the Royal Hong Kong

This outside-ofschool experience was due to an arrangement between my Hong Kong Internation-School (HKIS)and Taipei

Police.

American School in Taiwan.

Each year, students from one school could visit the other school and sit in on a week of classes. About half of our HKIS students took this opportunity.

The left-behind faculty then had to find educational experiences for the left-behind students. We decided to each find a week of community experiences, and allow students to select the experiences they wanted. We also decided that we could meet and dismiss from school, but that the experiences must be out in the Hong Kong com-

I knew a new Hong Kong police officer who had just come from Canada with his family; he had been a Royal Canadian Mounted Policeman. He helped me contact the various divisions of the Royal Hong Kong Police in what was still a British Colony. The police were eager to show students how they operated. HKIS students were likewise eager - my program was overbooked!

Our first trip was to the police academy. Getting off the bus, students and I lined up as if we were recruits. They had us pair up and the officers put us through a series of physical tasks (sit-ups, etc.) - an admissions exam.

I had one student who huffedand-puffed when we had field trips. But when the officer tallied his low score, his brief comment - You failed - had a lot more impact than my field admonitions to him to get more exercise. Nevertheless everyone continued through the day, sampling police training.

At the end of the day, we teamed up in competition with the cadets in a tug-of-war. The men cadets were well prepared. Their British officers coordinated their efforts with measured orders of "Pull...Pull...Pull" that rapidly drug my boys into the mud. But we regained our reputation as my assertive Western girls, without any training, easily defeated the women police cadets who retained the mild manners of Asian females.

But we knew not to underestimate them. We had witnessed a half hour of their extensive training in – aikido - a form of martial arts where you subdue an opponent by pushing the joints of the body the wrong direction (such as pushing your finger joint backward). But aikido did not help in tug-of-war against aggressive Western girls.

A second day, my students divided up and joined motor inspection units that patrolled checkpoints for cars that failed to meet standards. A third day they again split up on patrol boats and accompanied the marine police on rapid hikes through the outlying islands and experienced some boat inspec-

A fourth morning, we had to deposit our cameras before we entered the underground police control room, a massive underground operations center that received 911 calls and dispatched officers.

That day, there was a team of police chiefs visiting from Kentucky to see the state-of-the-art operation. On the walls were massive electronic maps of streets in each district of Hong

Anytime a red light came on the map from a bank or other location, it flashed until the officers arrived on site. That never took more than a minute because police patrolled the streets on foot as well as in cars. They carried walkie-talkies that communicated with this control room, advanced for the 1970s.

They transmitted on one frequency and received on another. And if one was stolen, all would be immediately "re-chipped."
Singapore led in such technology, followed by Hong Kong and then Japan. The West would soon follow. This remains the state of technology adoption today, with Singapore always the world's leader. That afternoon, we toured their tall detective building. Students viewed preserved severed hands that had washed ashore. Detectives demonstrated the indoor ballistics range. But most unique to Hong Kong were the triad gangs. Detectives explained the origin of these secret criminal societies.

When the Ming Dynasty fell to the Manchu invaders who began the Qing Dynasty in 1636, Ming loyalists formed an underground secret society that eventually drifted from political opposition into a criminal protection racket, kidnapping for ransom, and other organized crime.

In order to prevent investigators from capturing a triad member and tracing to others through investigation and torture, the triads were set up so that a triad member only knew the identity of two others, but those two others did not know each other. Thus if one person failed to squeal, the chain of investigation could be broken.

And thus the name "triad." This criminal network had some legitimacy due to its historical origins. When Sun Yat-sen established the early Republic, he went to the Ming tombs to proclaim that there was no longer any need for this underground society. Nevertheless, it survived in Hong Kong despite police efforts.

There was an assumption that when mainland China took over in 1997, the triads would have to leave or be arrested. However, in 1989 when student leaders fled Tiananmen in Beijing, it was discovered that the triads operated brothels in Canton and other major Chinese cities. The triads had a network throughout China that even the Beijing government could not

"You want the student leaders out?" asked the triads. Sure enough, arrangements were made. Many student leaders who had fled into distant rural China were located and smuggled out through the triad network to Hong Kong, with the understanding that they would immediately fly onward to other countries. But all of that occurred later. Back to the last day of that week in 1976, I took my students to an area police station where foot patrolmen assembled at the 8-o'clock shift, standing at full attention in dress blues. They patrolled in pairs, both speaking fluent English and Cantonese. Some also indicated another foreign language under their badge. Each officer moved forward to the armory window and checked out a service pistol and a limited set of ammunition that they loaded and holstered. They would return this gun and ammunition at the end of their shift. The officers then left in pairs to walk their beat, each with two of my students in tow.

The next week, all of those students were back to a regular schedule of classes at HKIS. But many of them came by to express how this had changed the way that they viewed policemen.

And how their feet hurt from that last full day of walking! It has now been over 43 years, and I still remember that week as one of the best educational activities I ever planned. If every one of us had a policeman or policewoman in our family, we would have a different perspective toward law enforcement. But lacking that, I am convinced these types of real world experiences would improve society

Wasps more abundant than ever

By Jody G. Holthaus Meadowlark Extension District Agent, Livestock and Natural Resources

I really love the icemaker in my refrigerator, until it quits working! I was able to watch a video online and thought, "This is easy enough. I can do this.'

The first two times, it worked like a This charm. last time, I wasn't confident that it was going to work, so when the two screws fell into the ice cube tray, I figured the repairman could retrieve them.

The next day, I walked into the house and the hubby is enjoying an ice cold glass of water. I was shocked that the icemaker was working. I warned him about the two loose screws, but he couldn't see them. It was when the glass sat there and the ice melted that the two screws were found! He claims it would have killed him. Nope, just two loose screws.

If you visit my place these days, you might think that I have some screws loose. I'm on the attack of flying pests. I'm doing my own private research on fly/ wasp traps. I have three different kinds of purchased traps. I also watched some online videos on how to make your own. Three days in and I must admit the purchased sticky traps have three times more catches than the ones I've made.

Wasps seem to be more abundant than ever! Wasp species are categorized as social or solitary. As their name implies, social wasps live in colonies, which may number in the thousands. Within these colonies, female workers perform all duties within the nest. Solitary wasps live alone and therefore do not have a colony. They do lay eggs, but their eggs are left alone to hatch.

Some wasps are predatory, while others are parasitic. Predatory wasps kill and consume other insects as well as other animals, which they often feed to their larvae.

Parasitic wasps typically lay their eggs in the bodies of living creatures like caterpillars or spiders. The larvae feed on the stillliving host. Wasps can assist in the management of other pests, particularly in agriculture as biological control agents. Many wasps also feed on nectar from flowers and therefore function as pollinators. Some wasps are aggressive species and can sting when threatened. Unlike honeybees, wasps often are capable of stinging multiple times.

There are many species of wasps that are important pollinators. However, taken as a group, wasps do pollinate, but are not as effective at pollinating as the bees. This is primarily because bees have hairier bodies than wasps, so pollen is more likely to stick to a bee's body and be transported from one flower to another.

Late in the summer, the queen of some species will produce unfertilized eggs. These will develop into males. The males will fertilize the wasps that will become the queens of the following year. These fertilized females will overwinter in a sheltered location. In most cases, the rest of the colony will perish when winter comes.

Next spring, the queen will start laying eggs. The fertilized eggs that they produce will become workers, building the nest and feeding the larvae produced by the queen.

Cousins gather for Fisher-Stauffer reunion

By Mary E. Edwards

The Fisher-Stauffer cousins reunion was held on Sunday, June 23, at the Homestead Apartments community room with an equal number of Fishers and Stauffers. Members joined saying the flag salute, and Bob Beightel asked the blessing before the delicious carry-in dinner.

Russ Stauffer led the business meeting. Mary Edwards and Sue Wichman read the report of last year's reunion. Bob and Linda Beightel were recognized for a good job of hosting, as Brad Stauffer and Tim Morris were unable to attend.

The host committee for next year is Brad Stauffer, Sue Wichman and Marsha Morris. The committee will decide the meeting place.

Important events for family members since the last reunion included Bud Stauffer celebrating his 80th birthday on July 7, 2018, and Mary Edwards turning 80 on Jan. 28, 2019.

Bud was honored to be named Jackson County Firefighter of the year in 2018. He has served as a volunteer for the Mayetta Fire Department for 39 years. Bud's son, Todd, also serves on Mayetta F.D., as do two of Bud's grandchildren and two grandsons-in-law.

Bud and Shirley's granddaughter, Kenley, and her husband, Bryce Carpenter, is the seventh generation of the Stauffer family to own the place that was the Lauren and Saxon home for many years. It is eight miles west of Holton. The barn there was on the historic barn tour.

Holton firefighter Bryce Carpenter (left) and Holton Fire Chief Kevin Ingels took a minute to admire the 1928 American-LaFrance fire engine after it was unloaded into a rear bay at the Holton Public Safety Building on Thursday.

"I started working on our trucks in 1982 or 1983, so it's not really a hobby — it's more like an obsession," said Brantley, who retired as a firefighter in 2011 and now runs a museum dedicated to the Pompano Fire Department's history. "But I'm out of restorations — I've done enough of them.'

Brantley and a friend looked up the American-LaFrance engine's serial number of a database run by the Society for the Preservation and Appreciation of Antique Motor Fire Apparatus in America (SPAAM-FAA), finding out that it was Holton's old fire engine.

Brantley contacted Ingels, who told him that the Holton Fire Department was interested in finding out where its first

"We had lost our first truck at one time," Brantley said. "The City of Pompano sold it in 1969, and it ended up just sitting in a field and rotting away. It took us a long time, but we eventually found it. That was actually how I got into the restoring ousiness.

Brantley told Ingels that the old American-LaFrance was Holton's for the taking — but Holton would have to work out the "taking." Ingels then called local truck drivers to inquire about how much it would cost to get the old fire engine from Pompano to Holton.

"We knew we wanted to have a local truck driver haul it for us," Ingels said.

As luck would have it, Mann

On Thursday afternoon, Mann delivered the old fire engine to the Public Safety Building, and the old engine drew a small crowd of onlookers as firefighters used two winches, one on a fire department vehicle and the other on Mann's tractortrailer, to get it safely onto the ground.

With a little "power steering" from the firefighters, the American-LaFrance was moved into its current resting place in the Public Safety Building.

'Who knows what the path was between the time it left Holton and the time it came back?" Ingels said. "All I know is that told Ingels that he would be it'll need a lot of work, but it's home. I'm happy that we have it back now.'

So is Brantley. "I know what that meant for our guys, and I know what it means for Holton," he said. Ingels said the old fire engine's arrival in Holton on Thursday means that the fire department is currently in possession of the second, third and fourth fire engines that the Bank merger proposed

An application to merge a St. Joseph, Mo.-based bank that has a branch in nearby Horton with an Osawatomie-based bank will be submitted to the Federal Reserve Board for regulatory approval, it has been reported.

The application for the merger between Pony Express Community Bank, headquartered in St. Joseph, and First Option Bank, headquartered in Osawatomie, is the first step in the required regulatory process, Pony Express officials said in a news release issued last week.

If the merger is approved, the Pony Express bank name will change to First Option Bank, and Steven J. Handke, First Option CAO, will move his main office to the Horton branch, which serves customers in northern Jackson County.

It was reported that Handke, who is coordinating the merger, has 35 years of community banking experience, serving customers in Brown, Atchison, Jackson and Doniphan coun-

In addition to branch offices in Horton - which Pony Express acquired in 2010 from United Bank of Kansas — and St. Joseph, Pony Express has offices in Elwood and Troy. First Option has offices in Osawatomie, Paola, Louisburg, La Cygne and Spring Hill, serving more than 20,000 customers in that region, it was reported.

The merger, if approved, will leave First Option with more than $400 million in total assets. Final regulatory approval and the merger are expected to occur sometime in the fourth quarter of this year.

The 132 sites identified on the map are the only locations where turbines can be built in Nemaha Count, and Nextera must construct the wind turbines within 100 feet of the locations depicted in the site plan, according to the 19-page term sheet.

The maximum height of each wind turbines for the project is 500 feet for the term of the project. The company may replace wind turbines, but they must adhere to the 500-feet height limit.

The wind farm is also capped at 300 megawatts for the life of the project, it was reported.

All of the wind turbines must be set back at least 1.1 times the height of the wind turbine from public roads and a mile from incorporated municipal boundaries.

The term sheet also outlines restrictions and protocol regarding transmission line setbacks, sound levels, decommissioning and insurance. General liability insurance for the commercial construction project has been set at $3,000,000.

NextEra is also required to make an initial payment of $1.25 million to Nemaha County before construction begins.

Nemaha County is expected to receive $900,000 each year from NextEra for the first 10 years of the contract, $1,250,000 each year for the next 10 years and $1,110,000 a year during the final 10 years of the contract for a total of $33,930,000 in lieu of collecting local taxes on the wind farm, it was reported.
